

BUSH WINS BUDGET; MORE LIES AHEAD

Many things must have come to the minds of many people who reads this heading one day. Things like “Why give him the money” or “Maybe we’ll get some new development in our small town”

The president was not a happy man once he had seen this. Immediately he sent out people to grab this published headline wherever it was posted. He offered a grand prize of $50,000 for the most collected.

The man who won this generous prize Was Sanchez Bermuto. He went all over New York to grab as many newspapers as he could Find. He obviously picked a well-stocked area.

It is heard that he is doing well and his family is happily supplied with lots of paper to burn in their fireplace and lots of newspaper bats for the children to play with in the backyard.

“It was a very long day. My wife had the truck, so sadly I had to use the scooter and attach a trailer to my little scooter. I made many trips home to empty my trailer, but I’m very glad that my scooter is so reliable and fuel efficient.” It is heard that the President is going to refund Mr. Bermuto for the gas money spent especially since New York is such a massive city.

He president sued the company for the embarrassing and misleading newspaper mistake. There is still no word from the writer of the column who is being put into questioning on behalf of the President’s request.

Maybe now even myself as a writer will check the spelling and grammar of all my writing an extra time. Hopefully next week there will be more news on the lawsuit and the reporter’s input on the story.
